City moves to buy hilltop space

Development plan amended to get Michigan Plaza land

The commercial portion of the former Madison Plaza retail site the City of Madison hopes to purchase and quickly secure developers for both retail and multi-family housing at the intersection of Michigan Road and Clifty Drive. The overall tract, which has been in decline for more than 20 years and unused since all structures were demolished in 2015, includes about 22 acres total. (Courier staff photo by Mark Campbell)

The City of Madison has taken the next step toward seeing that a long-vacant commercial property on Madison's hilltop is once again an asset to the community and no longer an eyesore.

The city's Redevelopment Commission approved a resolution Tuesday to amend the city's development plan allowing Madison to enter into negotiations with a Lexington, Kentucky, commercial real estate group to purchase the former Madison Plaza, at the intersection of Michigan Road and Clifty Drive, for redevelopment as both commercial property and multi-family housing.

Mayor Bob Courtney said the city hopes to achieve what Madison Plaza Group LLC (MPG) has been unable to do over the past five years — and for almost two decades before that — by agreeing to buy the property and recruiting its own developers for both the western strip of the parcel with frontage on Michigan Road as commercial/retail business and the previously unused and landlocked eastern wooded strip of the property for housing.

"This is pretty exciting. We have some work to do but the former retail center there has been vacant for far too many years," Courtney said. "We want to develop that property so that it is not sitting vacant any longer. It's become a bit of an eyesore over the last few years and we want to make sure we are bringing our economic development efforts to not only downtown but on the hilltop, too. It's going to be a nice complement to the hilltop community, particularly as an addition to the major sidewalk project that we are in the design stages on for Clifty Drive."

The resolution would give Courtney authority to negotiate with the seller to acquire the property by Feb. 21 and then close on the 22-acre parcel in six months if conditions of the purchase agreement are met — conditions that allow the city to back out if it has not secured a developer for at least the commercial portion of the site by that closing.

Courtney said if the proposal goes as planned — and the city has studied the site for years but began its latest efforts under the previous administration of Mayor Damon Welch with Courtney

3 familiar names missing from ballot

By COLLIN OVERTON

Voters may have noticed three familiar names missing from the primary ballot released by the Jefferson County Voter Registration Office this week.

Superior Court Judge Michael Hensley, Jefferson County Council member Joe Craig and Coroner Rodney Nay did not appear on the primary ballot, which required candidates to register before noon Feb. 7.

Craig and Hensley have said they will not seek re-election, while Nay said he will be added to the ballot by the Democratic Party before the July 6 deadline.

Craig, the longtime owner and principal of the Craig Toyota dealership on Clifty Drive, said Wednesday he is not seeking re-election after what will be 32 years on county council. He was first elected in 1988 and was part of a commission that established the county's 911 system as it is today, consolidated county dispatch, significantly enlarged one jail and authorized the construction of a new jail, and faced the issues of increased crime and drug use in the area.

Craig said that while it has been an honor to represent taxpayers and make connections around the community, after eight elections, he felt it is time to step away.

"I'll be 66 coming up here soon," Craig said. "I have other priorities than I did then. I feel very fortunate that I was allowed to represent taxpayers this way throughout the years, campaigning and going door to door, meeting people...there have been so many blessings."

In addition to serving on the council and owning the dealership for the past 30 years, Craig has served on numerous boards and commissions, including United Way, the Madison Area Chamber of Commerce, Visit Madison, Automobile Dealers Association of Indiana and Madison Redevelopment Commission. Drug crime increase keeps driving up costs

By MAGGIE HILLERY
Courier staff writer

The 2020 Jefferson County budget is about six-weeks old, but the impact of the increase in cases involving illegal drugs continues to rear its head in dollars and cents.

Sheriff David Thomas went before the county council Thursday night to ask for a transfer of funds to cover the additional expenses his department is incurring from housing inmates in facilities in other counties because of the overcrowding in the existing county jail. Thomas has regularly had to go before the council for several months as his expenses have grown with the arrests in Jefferson County.

"Almost every one is some kind of drug charge," he told the council in response to a question, estimating that 85% to 90% of the arrests are drug-related with 85% to 90% of those arrests involving meth.

He said most of the inmates are there because of repeat offenses, failure to appear in other cases or are violent offenders.

Thomas said he has at this time about 135 inmates in the Jefferson County Jail, which was designed and built for 109.

There are another 67 inmates housed primarily in county jails in Crawford, Scott and Switzerland counties, he said. He explained to the council that he has worked to find the best rates and availability he can for housing

Bill could result in kids sent to jail younger, for more crimes

By MAREK MAZUREK
South Bend Tribune

A bill that would lower the age at which juveniles could be sent to the Indiana Department of Correction passed the Indiana Senate last week and now moves to the House.

The bill, originally authored by Senator Erin Houchin, R-Salem, would allow courts to sentence children as young as 12 to the Department of Correction and expands the list of crimes that could send a child to jail to include an attempt to commit murder, rape, kidnapping and armed robbery. The bill also increases the maximum sentence for juveniles to six years.

In testimony before a senate committee, Houchin said this bill, as well as a similar one in the previous legislative session, were proposed on the heels of a shooting at a Noblesville middle school in May 2018. In that incident, a 13-year-old student shot and injured a classmate and a teacher, but could not be charged as an adult for attempted murder.

"Unfortunately in this case, the perpetrator was sentenced to a juvenile facility where he will be released on his 18th birthday with no record, if not sooner," Houchin said in front of the committee.

Local reaction to the bill is mixed.

St. Joseph County Prosecutor Ken Cotter said he supports the bill and sees it applying only in very rare cases.

"Ninety-nine point nine percent of the time what we need to do is give (juveniles) care and support from the community," Cotter said. "I just want options to protect our community in those extremely rare cases."

According to data collected by the state, there were only 11 children in Indiana who were charged with any of the offenses the bill would apply to from 2015 to 2018 while they were 12.

Opponents of the bill, however, say placing juveniles in detention facilities is not effective for the offender's rehabilitation, even for serious crimes.

"It's too young, it's way too young," St. Joseph County Probate Court Judge Jason Cichowicz said. "Kids make mistakes, kids make poor judgment calls and sometimes that results in harsh things that happen in the community. I think we should be working with them to see if we can make a breakthrough."

Cichowicz, who was a juvenile public defender for more than a decade, said providing counseling and other services for juveniles and their families is often more effective than sending an offender to jail, because the Department of Correction may not have the programs in place to best address each individual's needs.

"We're the ones that have been working with the child for a long time, we've seen them coming in the court," Cichowicz said. "I don't necessarily want to hand the baton off to somebody and reinvent the wheel."

The bill, while not directly contradicting a United States Supreme Court ruling limiting life sentences for juveniles, does run counter to the justification given for that decision. The Court found persuasive scientific testimony that juvenile brains have not developed to the point of adult understanding of consequences and impulse control.

Both Cichowicz and Bill Bruinsma, the executive director of the county's juvenile justice center, also oppose a provision in the bill which allows juveniles to be sentenced to the DOC for up to six years.

The bill does mandate a report be sent to the court when the juvenile turns 18, but Bruinsma said he would like to see annual updates on the child's progress.

"I would have asked that evaluation of progress come back every year," Bruinsma said. "People change and that would tell us if they are being rehabilitated."

Cotter feels the proposed six-year limit gives prosecutors more leeway in handling juveniles and could lead to him trying fewer juveniles as adults. He explained he sometimes requests to waive juvenile cases to adult court if he feels a child would not receive an adequately long sentence.

Under current law, a juvenile who commits a serious offense cannot be sentenced past the age of 18 if the child is younger than 16 at the time of the offense.

An amendment added to the legislation would create a review panel to study racial disparity in the juvenile justice system after opponents, notably Indianapolis Democrat Greg Taylor, expressed concerns the bill would make racial divides in the juvenile justice system worse.

The bill also includes provisions that prevent inmates under 21 years old from being housed in the general population of a prison and inmates under 18 to be housed in the same cell as an adult in county jails.

The bill passed the senate on Tuesday and now heads to the house.

Granger Republican Linda Rogers and Bremen Republican Ryan Mishler voted in favor of it, while South Bend Democrat David Niezgodski voted against it.

Kentucky native gets posthumous brigadier general rank

Kentucky

FRANKFORT — A Kentucky native who attended the U.S. Military Academy and achieved the rank of colonel was promoted posthumously to the honorary rank of brigadier general by Gov. Andy Beshear. Charles Young was born in Mays Lick, Kentucky, in 1864 to enslaved parents. He graduated from high school in Ohio, where his parents escaped slavery, Beshear's office said in a news release. As an Army officer, Young served in assignments ranging from Haiti and Liberia to Mexico and Nigeria. When he was medically discharged from active duty, Young had been promoted to colonel and was the highest-ranking African American in the military, the release said. Young was buried in Arlington National Cemetery and was given full military honors. The event was in the Capitol Rotunda Tuesday as part of the Legislative Black History Month Celebration.

House panel OK's hike on tobacco products

FRANKFORT — A bill to impose an excise tax on vaping products cleared a House committee Tuesday. The bill also would raise existing taxes on tobacco products other than cigarettes. The measure would raise nearly $50 million over two years, the Lexington Herald-Leader reported. The measure advances to the full House. Rep. Jerry Miller, the bill's lead sponsor, offered a compromise version that would result in a smaller revenue gain for the state. Health advocates hoped for more but spoke in favor of the compromise during a House budget committee meeting. Raising taxes on tobacco products not only boosts state revenue, it discourages youths from buying those products, said Ben Chandler, president of the Foundation for a Healthy Kentucky. Vaping — using an electronic cigarette to inhale concentrated nicotine vapor — has become common in middle schools and high schools, Chandler said. The bill would not affect cigarettes. It would levy a wholesale tax on vaping products. The only tax now on vaping products is the 6% sales tax on most retail goods. Miller's bill would add vaping-related items to the list of "other tobacco products" in state law, subjecting them to related taxes. The wholesale tax on those products would rise from the current 15% to 25%.

Highway traffic fatalities increase

FRANKFORT — Highway traffic fatalities increased by 10 last year, according to a preliminary count. According to initial data, there were 734 fatalities in 2019, compared to 724 in 2018, the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet's Office of Highway Safety said in a statement on Monday. "A single death is one too many," Transportation Secretary Jim Gray said. "And our 2020 Recommended Highway Plan is our commitment to improving highway safety. Through this plan Governor Beshear calls for a historic $100 million investment in the Highway Safety Improvement Program and an aggressive move to install more than 100 miles of life-saving guardrail across the Commonwealth." The Office of Highway Safety is increasing efforts to encourage safe driving habits through localized media campaigns and partnerships, said acting Director Jason Siwula. The figures will remain preliminary until all highway crash data is collected and a final report will be released in April. Preliminary numbers so far in 2020 indicate there have been 56 traffic fatalities, which is 17 less than last year at the same time.

Lexington builds new kennel for police dogs

LEXINGTON — The Lexington Police Department has a new kennel with room for 20 dogs in the Canine Unit. The 4,000 square-foot facility has larger office space, a conference room and a veterinary room. Lexington Mayor Linda Gorton said the new kennel is an big improvement over the old facility. A release from the city said last year, the canine unit responded to 1,014 calls for service, a 21% increase over 2018. The police department currently has 13 dogs. The name of the facility will remain the same. It was dedicated as the Roy H. Mardis Canine Center in 1994. The Lexington officer was killed in the line of duty while tracking a homicide suspect with his dog, Amanda, in 1985.

Audit cites multiple faults by county clerk

BOONEVILLE — The results of an audit show that an elected county clerk has been failing to properly perform her duties and left nearly $30,000 owed to her county at the end of a recent fiscal year, according to a report the state auditor issued Monday. In the latest report, which reviewed financial records through December 2017, Owsley County Clerk Shanna Oliver is accused of not reconciling her office's bank account, not submitting required reports and not making some tax payments on time, among other citations, Auditor Mike Harmon said. Oliver is responsible for preparing the county's tax bills and collecting fees that support schools, libraries and other services, news outlets reported. But the results released Monday showed that her office didn't submit required quarterly reports to the state Department for Local Government, and the one she did provide was wrong, The Lexington Herald-Leader said. The audit also found just over 30 transactions from 2016 that had not cleared by the end of the year, in addition to open accounts that left about $28,500 owed to the county for 2017 and more than $11,200 for 2016, according to the results. Harmon's office said it would refer the findings to the state attorney general, the Department of Revenue and the Department for Local Government for further action. This audit was the fourth in a row that Harmon's office has referred Owsley County to other state agencies, the newspaper added. Oliver didn't publicly respond to the report, and didn't return a telephone call from the Herald-Leader seeking comment.

Fatal Mishawaka crash renews questions about police chases

By MAREK MAZUREK AND CHRISTIAN SHECKLER
South Bend Tribune

Authorities stand near the scene of a fatal Mishawaka crash Friday night that killed driver John Riedle of South Bend, who was broadsided by the white Jeep in Mishawaka, which was being chased through two counties by Indiana State Police. (South Bend Tribune photo by Howard Dukes)

MISHAWAKA — Gary Chizum was working in the detailing shop at Home Street Auto Sales on Friday evening when he became hungry.

Chizum, the owner of the auto shop at the corner of McKinley Avenue and Home Street, said he turned west onto McKinley, heading to get some food, and was almost hit by a Jeep Cherokee that raced through the red light at a high speed.

"They were flying, man," Chizum said Monday afternoon from his office. "They looked like they were up on two wheels."

Moments later that Jeep ran another red light, police say, at the intersection of McKinley and Byrkit avenues, about four blocks west of Home Street, and broadsided a southbound Toyota Camry driven by John Riedle, 58, of South Bend. Riedle was pronounced dead at the scene. His passenger, Laszlo Nemeth, 58, of South Bend, was seriously hurt.

The driver of the Jeep was fleeing police who had been in pursuit for roughly 15 miles.

According to Sgt. Ted Bohner, a spokesman for the Indiana State Police, troopers first began pursuing the Jeep on the U.S. 20 Bypass because it was traveling at 99 miles per hour.

The Jeep, which troopers soon learned was stolen, led police on a high-speed chase through Elkhart and St. Joseph counties, with speeds ranging from 45 miles per hour to "upwards of 100," according to Bohner.

Bohner did not know how fast officers were driving when the crash occurred, but said troopers pulled back in their pursuit near the intersection of Home and McKinley because of traffic.

"When we come to an intersection and there's traffic, we aren't going to just fly through an intersection just because our lights and sirens are on," Bohner said. "We're going to slow down and make sure all traffic in all directions sees us before proceeding through."

Chizum, who had pulled onto the side of the road just west of the intersection at McKinley and Home after almost being hit by the Jeep, recalled seeing four police cars trailing the suspect "a ways off," but still traveling at high speed.

"This is after a stolen vehicle," Bohner said. "They were driving without regard for the public's safety before they had any type of police encounter."

According to a search of news clips, Friday's crash marked at least the 10th death since 2014 in crashes that resulted from high-speed chases or other police activity in St. Joseph and Elkhart counties.

After the crash, which occurred after 7:30 p.m. Friday, the driver of the stolen Jeep ran away on foot.

As of Monday night, he had yet to be caught or identified by police.

Four passengers were in the Jeep at the time of the crash and three of them were treated for minor injuries. All four were detained by police.

On Monday, St. Joseph County prosecutors announced charges of armed robbery against three of the passengers. The charges are unrelated to Friday's incident.

taking over in November — development should far exceed that which was stipulated in the terms of the previous deal.

"We need to basically lead the economic development activity there in order to insure that it happens," Courtney said. "We are projecting that the steps we are taking now will lead to almost $40 million of capital investment in that property. So if this works the way we are designing it, we will far and away exceed the original agreement we had with the current owners of the property to where they would put $10 million of development into that site."

Hoping that a cleared site ready for construction would expedite development, the previous agreement saw the city reach a deal with the owner to help finance demolition of the structure in 2015 with stipulations for $10 million in new development within five years.

With the deadline for that $10 million investment fast approaching — and MPG apparently failing to gain any traction at the site — the city saw an opportunity to once again step in and become facilitator. That new deal includes Madison buying the property for about $2.75 million — well under MPG's $3.4 million asking price — and then using the city's economic development resources to find buyers who will use the property to once again become an asset to the community.

"The seller has been good to work with and we've negotiated a substantial price reduction," Courtney said.

He said with the city taking over marketing the site to potential developers, a more selective approach can be followed in the type and scope of development that goes into one of the busiest corners on the hilltop. He also noted that Madison's ability to help provide infrastructure — such as access to Clifty Drive for the eastern portion of the property — could help fuel development of the landlocked and unused wooded portion of the property for multi-family housing.

Madison Plaza got its start as a strip mall and included department stores, a furniture store, pharmacy and various other retail shops and restaurants in its heyday, but as new development came to the hilltop and some of the tenants went out of business or relocated, the site began a steady decline.

Courtney said the risk to the city will be minimal in that the deal with MPG will stipulate that Madison does not have to go through with the purchase unless the city has found a commercial investor for at least the western portion of the parcel. He said Matt Wirth, director of the city's new Department of Economic Development, will head up the effort to land that investor along with his office, the Redevelopment Commission and city attorney.

Meanwhile, Courtney said the city must move forward with adopting the amendment to the redevelopment plan — which requires both Plan Commission and City Council approval — to establish the financing mechanism through the Tax Incremented Finance (TIF) District to make all the rest happen. Courtney said the money spent on the property will be recouped through sale of the property to future developers and through the added value to the property from that development.

"Right now in its current state the contribution to the TIF District from a property tax perspective is nothing effectively," Courtney noted. "Through the traction of this capital investment, we will be increasing the assessed value of that property which will actually create the revenue to the TIF District that will repay the investment into the property that we are making to begin with. So from our perspective the return on the investment will be quick and significant.

"Our approch to economic development is to support capital attraction that will happen immediately," Courtney added. "We won't enter into agreements where the city's return on its investment is speculated to occur in a distant future."

And unlike property being marketed and developed in the private sector, the city gets a say in the type of growth that will take place on a high profile hilltop corner.

"What we really like about it is when we control this property we control what goes there instead of being at the mercy of the current owner of the property to do whatever they want — which is pretty broad from a zoning perspective," Courtney said. "Because we control the real estate, we can work with specific developers to bring specific development to both of those sites. It will be a mix of commercial and retail and housing. We think that's the highest and best use for that real estate.

"If we don't do this, it could easily sit there for another decade," Courtney added. "It's literally been a blighted property I think for probably the past 20 years. If you remember what was there before the demolition it was a partially occupied, unmaintained, outdated retail shopping center. What we will bring in is a modern construction that will fill the needs of the community better."

community service," Craig said he would be putting more time into growing his business, which is the oldest Toyota dealer in Indiana.

Craig said he was grateful to have worked with a number of people who helped keep the county financially stable through tough times, often across party lines.

"Politics were left out of it as soon as we all got together," he said.

Judge Hensley, on the other hand, is retiring for the time being and taking a year off to decide his next move after over 40 years of practice.

Hensley, 64, was elected judge on the Democratic ticket in 2014 after nearly three decades of practice at Madison law firms. He oversaw a number of changes to the Jefferson County courts in his six-year term, including the addition of pretrial release for defendants, adding a magistrate to the court system and securing reimbursement from the state on public defender expenses, which now saves the court a couple hundred thousand dollars a year, he said.

"Pretrial release hasn't cured our jail problem, but I think it's certainly helped it," Hensley said.

Hensley graduated from law school in May 1980 at Indiana University Bloomington and spent the next eight years working as in-house legal councel for Madison Bank and Trust. He was then a partner at several Madison law firms throughout the years, including Hensley, Walro, Collins & Hensley, which he ran with his father, Joseph Hensley; Kemper, Collins, & Hensley; Collins, Hensley & Wynn; and Jenner, Pattison, Hensley & Wynn.

The years of constant meetings, after-hour work and waiting on call have culminated in a much-needed break for Hensley, who said his longest vacation was two weeks in 2008 to recover from open heart surgery.

He plans on keeping his license and possibly work as a senior judge on occasion, or following in his father's footsteps and writing legal books. His father, a circuit court judge for two terms and a representative in the Indiana General Assembly in the 1960s, was also a lifelong fan of science fiction and crime stories and wrote more than 100 short stories in those genres.

"I appreciate the opportunity to be of service the past six years and wish my successor, whoever it is, the best of luck," he said.

Jefferson County Coroner Rodney Nay, who is up for re-election, did not appear on the ballot for much different reasons.

Nay said a couple of coroner cases got in the way of filing before the Friday deadline, but he'll still appear on the November ballot. Now seeking his second term in Jefferson County, Nay said he explained the situation to Democratic Chair Dana Riddle and she agreed to add him to the ticket.

Nay beat Republican challenger Scott Stevens in 2016 to secure his first term, after eight years as coroner in Switzerland County and more than 20 years as president and owner of Morgan & Nay Funeral Centre in Madison and Hanover. Nay is also a co-owner and funeral director of Haskell & Morrison Funeral Home in Vevay and has held positions with numerous boards and organizations, including the Indiana Funeral Directors Association, Madison Elks Club No. 524, Wreaths Across America and at least three other cemetery boards.

No other Democratic or Republican candidate was listed on the primary ballot for coroner.

Charlie's Music

Craig Philipp tries to score the rare musical three-peat

By CHARLIE ROHLFING

Craig Philipp wants to score a musician's hat trick in Madison. He's come close a few times, but it has eluded him. (For those not familiar, the term "hat trick" is used in soccer and hockey when a single player scores three goals in one game. Not an easy feat.)

"I'm actually in three different bands," explained Craig, "and the idea would be to play with each band on three consecutive nights. I need to know about 150 songs to pull it off because there's almost no overlap between the band repertoires."

Craig moved to the Madison area back in 2007 to teach chemistry at Hanover College. It was his first foray into academia, having been a food chemist at various companies in his earlier career. Now, after 13 years, he's firmly enmeshed in the lifestyle and musical culture of our unique community.

"When I first moved here the Electric Lady was still going strong, and the Broadway Tavern. It seemed like any given Friday or Saturday there was live music at four or five places. It made it extremely palatable to move here, knowing the music scene was so strong.

"On a personal level, I have a long history playing in various bands. In high school up in Cleveland I played bass in a rock band that got really popular on the local bar circuit. We were just 16 or 17 years old, playing clubs almost every weekend.

"Then as I moved around, for college and jobs, I was in various groups and duos. Down in Florida when I was in my late 30s I was introduced to the blues for the first time. That started a lifelong love affair with that genre. I was in a blues band for about 5 years down there.

"When I first came to Madison looking for houses to live in, Jim Pruett was showing me around. Making small talk he asks if I have any hobbies and I tell him blues music. Next thing I know I'm playing bass with the Blues Devils, Kenny Guthrie, Brook and Carrie, Leah, Chris Watson. That was an amazing 5 years.

"Which brings me to today and the three bands I'm currently playing in. I'm in Four Piece Chicken Dinner band with Leah Pruett, Joe Perkinson and Chris on drums. I'm in a blues and classic rock band with a bunch of Louisville guys called the Bottle Trees. And I'm part of a group of college folks currently called The Men's Room.

"The Hanover group is a very interesting project. Another professor there, Bill Bettler and I came up with this concept of inviting a couple of college kids to join us and form a band. The only issue is, as college kids they eventually graduate and move on, so we have to keep finding new replacements.

"We've been doing it about 8 years now and we've had something like five pairs of different students play with us. The way we do it is half of the song choices come from Bill and I, and half come from the students. So we have to learn each other's songs. It's a lot of fun. With these latest students, their songs are actually older than ours!

"We rename the band with each new iteration, but the only rule is it has to have word Room in the title. It's all guys at the moment, so we're The Men's Room.

"Anyway, my ultimate goal is to play three consecutive nights in Madison with the three different bands. I've done some two-in-a-row shows, but haven't been able to line up all three yet. But I will!"

Speaking of hat tricks, it's very possible now for live music fans to score their own these days in Madison. This last Saturday some friends and I started our evening at Mad Paddle for the solo acoustic show there. We headed over to the Winery and caught Rusty Bladen's last set, which was awesome, as always. And then we strolled up the alley to the Taproom to see Erik Brunner. He delighted everyone with an upbeat rendition of Disney's "Let it Go." Get out there and enjoy people!

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK:

On Thursday nights, Hippies Music up the road in Vernon is doing something interesting — an all-evening jam session, starting with bluegrass, then blues, then any style. On Friday there's a Nashville-quality country show at the Red Bike featuring recording artist Sunny Sweeney. And on Saturday the hot ticket will be the Songwriters in the Round show, also at the Red Bike, with Greg Foresman, John Mann Jon Byrd & Danny Flanigan. If upbeat Irish/Celtic is your jam, go to Thomas Family Winery on Saturday for The Bold Roberts (love that band name!)

outside of Jefferson County. He said daily charges for housing range from $35 to $37.50. He said he usually takes about 12 to 15 inmates a month to an Indiana Department of Corrections facility to serve longer sentences.

One bill Thomas received last month for housing inmates in another facility came to $44,555. Auditor Sherry Eblen told Thomas during the discussion that the sheriff's budget was some $31,000 in the red at that time for the line item that covers housing outside the local jail. That does not mean the bills for the jail will not be paid, but it does require transfers of money from the county general fund to cover those costs, a task that the county council handles at almost every meeting.

It has not been unusual for the county jail in the last several months to have a total inmate number hovering between 190 and 200. In 2017 the county was cited by state examiners for its overcrowded jail and the resulting conditions and given a deadline to address the issue. The county council took action last year to purchase land, to fund a new jail and to add additional income taxes to cover the cost of building the jail. That jail is now projected to cost about $37 million. The process of designing the facility and hiring the contractors to build is underway but not expected to be completed in time for construction to begin before sometime in the first quarter of 2021.

Thomas told the council that he has been working to lower the numbers of inmates in the Jefferson County facility because of concerns for the safety of both inmates and jail personnel.

"Reduction in jail cuts down on jail fights," Thomas told the council, noting that reduces the instances of injuries and even more charges.

The discussion for the council became whether to transfer only the amount of funds needed each month to cover the overage in expenses or to allocate a larger amount to try to cover a longer period. It was finally decided to transfer $250,000 to the sheriff's department account and the council asked Thomas to come to each meeting to update them on the continuing costs.

The discussion about the pressure on the jail because of the increase in drug cases was preceded by a warning from another department that is a key part of the judicial process for offenders, although not funded by the county.

Amber Finnegan, who oversees the county Court Services office, warned the council that her office is in a financial crisis at the moment.

Community Corrections, which is a state-supervised program in the majority of Indiana counties, serves defendants in the judicial system as they make their way through to try to find ways to help them navigate the processes, avoid incarceration if possible, and not become repeat offenders.

The offices are funded by grants or through money obtained in fees assessed to defendants for the services of the office. The money is handled through the county auditor's office but is not a part of the county budget.

In calendar year 2019, Jefferson County's office, which is called Court Services, saw 1,232 clients.

The problem now is in their Project Income budget because clients are not paying the fees they are assessed for services, Finnegan explained, which means the office is without the income that funds significant expense categories, including the cost of electronic monitoring that enables a client to be free instead of incarcerated, the costs of drug screening, or training program manuals.

Finnegan warned the council the department is going to need some "long-term support" if the situation doesn't change quickly.

In an interview Friday morning, Finnegan said that as of January 2020, the department had $13,000 in funds in its Project Income category. Its usual monthly cost for monitoring fees alone is $10,000 to $14,000.

As of December 2019, she said, the office had 221 clients who owed a total of $394,927.

She has begun trying to collect state income tax refunds from delinquent clients, an action that she said has resulted in threatening and unpleasant phone calls.

The growing problems related to drugs come up regularly at county meetings.

At a jail planning session in late January, Circuit Court Judge D.J. Mote put on the table the issue of in-house treatment.

"Our county is being ravaged by methampetamine," he said.

Mote's concern was underlined late last year when Jefferson County Prosecutor David Sutter told county council members 31 cases of possession of methamphetamine were handled by his office in 2014. That number rose to 204 by the end of 2018, he said.

INDY BOUND

CUB GOING GREYHOUND: Madison senior Noah Caswell (60) signed to play football for the University of Indianapolis last week. (Courier file photos by David Campbell)

Madison standout Noah Caswell signs with Indianapolis

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Noah Caswell spent the past several seasons terrorizing quarterbacks and running down ballcarriers, but when you play for a football program that hasn't had much success, getting noticed by college coaches can be difficult.

But the Madison Consolidated High School senior was finally able to break through and get the publicity that he richly deserved. Last week was awarded for a strong high school career by signing to play at the University of Indianapolis in a ceremony attended by nearly 100 teammates, classmates and family members.

"It's really exciting. I'm a little nervous though," said Caswell, breaking into a smile.

Like most Madison players, Caswell played on both sides of the ball for most of his career, but it was at defensive end where he excelled, earning all-Hoosier Hills Conference honors. Often facing double teams, Caswell was rarely out of position and his combination of size, strength and speed made him the focal point of the Cub defense.

But despite that excellence, colleges weren't knocking down his door and even Indianapolis took some time to convince.

"(Indianapolis) was pitched to me at the beginning of the fall and that stuck with me. I was trying to get their attention by emailing them," said Caswell, who plans to major in electrical engineering. "Eventually they called me and asked me to visit and I went to visit it just felt really good with the coaches and the relationships. And then they called me that night and offered me a roster spot."

Madison football coach Leroy Wilson only got to coach Caswell one season but he quickly realized he had somebody special.

"I remember the first time I saw him this summer and I said, 'He gets to play for us?'" Wilson said with a laugh. "When you watch him on film, he's all over the place, making plays. He led our team in tackles with over 70 and missed two games. That's an unbelievable feat. He led our defense for sure."

The UIndy program Caswell joins is one of the best in the region. Indianapolis had a terrific 2019 season, going 9-2 overall and finishing second in the Great Lakes Valley Conference at 7-1. The Greyhounds reached the NCAA Division II Tournament where they lost 37-27 to No. 15 Central Missouri in the first round.

As a freshman, Caswell will likely spend the season refining his skills at defensive end, where he will specialize.

"Their linebackers are 200, 195 and they drop into coverage a lot. They said because of how big and fast I am they could use me on the line," Caswell said.

Wilson believes Caswell's best days are ahead of him.

"Nothing against the other kids he played with, but once you get to that level and you have other players like you, it makes you better. That's the expectation," Wilson said. "I'm excited to see what he does as a pass-rusher and defensive end. I think that's a great fit for him. He's great with his hands, he's very athletic, very fast for his size and he's only going to get bigger. They're getting an absolute baller for sure."

Looking back at his time in Madison, Caswell has plenty of reasons to be nostalgic. But it will be his teammates that he will miss the most.

"I love all of the people I played with. They gave me a lot of memories to look back on," Caswell said. "I've played with the seniors since I was in junior high so I really built a relationship with them. And the coaches have been great. They've been supportive, not just in football but in life as well."

"You won't find too many kids that will work harder than Noah Caswell," Wilson said. "This is definitely a well-deserved honor for him."

YOU KNOW, IF VALENTINE'S DAY IS ABOUT ANYTHING, IT SHOULD BE ABOUT EXPRESSING LOVE, NOT JUST A DAY FOR "TRADITIONAL" ROMANCE...
LIKE MY LOVE FOR YOU TWO! THAT'S WHAT WE SHOULD BE CELEBRATING!

YOU KNOW, NOW THAT HIL IS 14 WE DON'T NEED A BABYSITTER ANYMORE. MEANING WE CAN GO OUT ON MORE DAYS THAN JUST VALENTINE'S...
AND EVEN DO THINGS OTHER THAN RESTAURANTS AND MOVIES.
I KNOW WE'RE WAY BEHIND THE CURVE ON THIS ONE, BUT WHAT ABOUT AN ESCAPE ROOM?
TED, THEY'VE ROUTINELY HAD TO SEND POLICE AND EVEN CORPSE-SNIFFING DOGS TO FIND US IN CORN MAZES. AN ESCAPE ROOM WOULD BE OUR "CASK OF AMONTILLADO."

BRIDGE

IF HE DECLINES, FORCE HIM ANYWAY

When did the routine, "After you," "No, after you," start?

The earliest reference I can find is Alphonse and Gaston, two Frenchmen who bowed deeply and never got anything done because each waited for the other. Forty years later, the theme was adopted by Warner Bros.' Goofy Gophers, Mac and Tosh.

Today's deal made me think of that. How should South play in four spades after West leads the trump jack, and East plays the queen?

In the auction, South's one-spade rebid showed four spades and was forcing for one round, not to game. If instead South had jumped to two spades, that would have been fourth-suit game-forcing and denied holding four spades.

Over one spade, North jumped to game with a hand worth 18 support points (16 high-card points and 2 shortage points for the singleton) and having only five losers (one spade, one heart, one diamond and two clubs -- you look at only the first three cards in each suit).

Perhaps your first thought is to ruff dummy's club losers in your hand. The play goes: spade king, club ace, club ruff, heart to dummy, club ruff, heart to dummy, club ruff with your last trump, diamond king. But East wins with his ace and returns a heart, West ruffing your ace. Now you have four losers: two spades, one heart (dummy's six) and one diamond.

It is better to establish your diamond suit. At trick two, lead dummy's diamond. And if East ducks (good defense), you say, "No, after you," by leading another diamond and discarding a heart or club from the board. You will lose only two trumps and the diamond ace.

She loves to get attention and loves scratches behind her ears. She also likes to make new friends with those that visit the shelter.

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter currently has two dogs or puppies, and eight cats or kittens available. Pictures of additional pets waiting for adoption can be viewed at www.sisaveapet.com

Normal shelter hours are Monday, Thursday and Friday from noon to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday from noon to 4 p.m., and Sunday by appointment only. It is closed Tuesday. The shelter number is (812) 273-1788 and the email is animal.shelter39@jefferson-county.in.gov

All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spayed or neutered. Discount is courtesy of the Animal Shelter and the Jefferson County Humane Society.

Volunteers are always welcome at the shelter. Individuals must be at least 16 years old to volunteer. Volunteers can help with everyday cleaning, answering phones, and exercising the pets. Contact the shelter for details.

The shelter is a registered organization with the Kroger Community Rewards program. To support the shelter, register a Kroger card at www.krogercommunityrewards.com and enter FL919.

Support the shelter while walking your dog. Use the "Walk for a Dog" or "Woof-Trax" app available through the App Store or Google Play. For each mile walked, a donation is made to the shelter.

A list of needed items can be found on the shelter website. Donations can be mailed to 2727 Hannah Drive, Madison, IN 47250 or dropped off during shelter hours. The shelter also accepts aluminum and steel cans, which are recycled and the proceeds put toward the medical fund. The shelter asks that aluminum and steel donations be separated. Steel cans should also be rinsed before they are dropped off. Cans can be dropped off at anytime in a bin located on the east side of the shelter.

Those with missing pets can stop by the shelter, call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption.

Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

No word for the loss of a child

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: Reading your column on grieving, I was reminded of a quote I read regarding a parent's grief upon losing a child. Perhaps this would be helpful.

"A wife who loses a husband is called a widow. A husband who loses a wife is called a widower. A child who loses their parents is called an orphan. There is no word for a parent who loses a child. That's how awful the loss is."

This is to remind those who admonish, "Get over it, already." They are not at all helpful! — A Grieving Reader in NY

Dear Grieving Reader in NY: Thank you for sharing this beautiful quote. May it bring some comfort to others who have lost a child.

Dear Annie: I was touched by the wisdom in your response to "Bitter." Confession is good for the soul. My first impression was that the woman is so self-absorbed that she is dangerous to her family's ongoing dynamics. But your answer recognized and acknowledged her personal hurt and addressed it gracefully so a positive redirection could be introduced.

I am writing this to applaud the wisdom demonstrated in your thoughtful and thought-provoking column and very kind response to her. It was a blessing to read it. — Happy Reader

Dear Happy Reader: Thank you for your incredibly kind words. I am printing your letter to highlight the importance of trying to give people the benefit of the doubt — and offering love and acceptance instead of judgment.

Dear Annie: Recently, you responded to a question regarding whether to go to a rescue organization or a breeder for a husky puppy. Your response included a reference to Petfinder. Another good resource for rescued animals is the Rescue Me Pet Foundation. They have a wide variety of animal types and of breeds of each animal type. If one organization can't help, perhaps the other can. I applaud you for encouraging the adoption of rescued pets. — Rex Rescuer

Dear Rescuer: Thank you for your suggestions.

Dear Annie: The end of 1998 was horrible for me. I lost my father in November to cancer, and in December, I lost my 50-year-old husband to heart issues.

What has gotten me through all these years has been to think positively and to surround myself with everything positive: my favorite music, my favorite colors in clothing, my most positive friends and, especially, my family.

I have also gone back to church and am very involved in many different projects. — Tips to Cope

Dear Tips to Cope: Thank you for sharing what has supported you through your grief.

Dear Annie: Your response to "Useless in CT" was spot on. Many years ago, my 16-year-old daughter asked that I not intervene with a high school teacher so that she could handle the situation herself. She was, and is, the type of person who could communicate rationally without becoming rattled. I find this approach difficult, so I prefer the written word.

If the granddaughter is easily intimidated by bullies, she might consider writing a clearly worded letter to her grandmother. With help from her mother, the letter could outline her feelings and offer an explanation as to why she will be no longer be a participant in the gift exchange. This would enable her to put forth her side without risking verbal interruptions and excuses that may be offered by the grandmother. It may even help grandma see the result of her behavior and work to repair their relationship. — Southern Girl

Dear Southern Girl: Thank you for offering another option for sharing our thoughts and emotions — the written word. Writing letters can be a beautiful and liberating way to express our emotions. Sometimes, we don't even need to send the letters to experience the catharsis.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book — featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette — is available as a paperback and e-book. Go to http://www.creators-publishing.com for more information.
